

Your website guide

Everything you can do yourself, in plain English.

Bookmark this page on your phone.

One thing to do first

Your site is live, your domain is connected and your Google reviews are switched on. The only thing left is yours to set.

1. Put your real booked dates in before you start sharing the site around, so nobody enquires for dates you cannot take. Section 2 walks you through it, it takes about a minute.

1. What you can change yourself

Your site is hand built, which is why it loads fast and looks the way it does. The trade off is that some things are easy for you to change and some need me. Here is the honest split.

You can do these anytime, no help needed

- Your availability. Update your booked dates yourself anytime on the My availability page. It is just a Google Sheet, no code.
- Collecting Google reviews. Send your review link to happy clients anytime, it drops them straight into the review box.
- New reviews build up on your Google listing automatically, which is what helps you show up in searches. If you get a cracker you want on the website itself, send it over and I will add it.
- Your Instagram. The site links to your profile, so anything you post shows up when people click through.

Message me for these

- Adding or swapping photos
- Changing prices or service wording
- Adding or removing suburbs
- New sections or pages

These live inside the website code, so they are a quick job for me but not something you would want to be doing yourself on your phone. Just send me a message with what you want changed and I will sort it.

2. Your availability calendar

Your Availability page shows the next three months at a glance, like a hotel. Each date is one of three things:

- Green, available
- Amber, limited, one or two spaces left
- Pink and crossed out, fully booked

It also works on the enquiry form. When someone picks their dates, a note appears telling them whether those dates are free, limited or booked. It never stops them enquiring though, so you still hear from people on busy dates and can pass them to your friends.

Updating it yourself

Your booked dates live in a Google Sheet. You edit the sheet, the website follows a few minutes later. That is the whole system.

- 1 Open your My availability page and tap Open my availability sheet.
- 2 Add a row: put the dates in the From and To columns, then click the Status cell and pick from the drop-down. There is nothing to type.
- 3 That is it. Close the sheet, the site updates itself.

Delete a row once that booking is done. Anything not in the sheet shows as available. You can do all of this from the Google Sheets app on your phone.

You do not need to log every walk

Just block out the stretches you genuinely cannot take work, like your trip to Ireland. A calendar that is roughly right is far more useful than one you feel guilty about keeping perfect.

3. Google reviews

Your Google Business Profile is verified and live, and the Leave a Google review button is on your website. Nothing more to set up.

Your review link

<https://g.page/r/Cch0vRdtMHSeEBM/review>

Save that in your phone. Send it to clients after a stay and it drops them straight into the review box. Reviews build up on your Google listing, which is what helps you show up when people search for a dog sitter near them.

Two things worth checking in your Google profile settings when you get a minute:

- Make sure it is set as a service area business listing your suburbs, rather than a shopfront with a street address. Otherwise Google publishes your home address on Maps.
- Add a few photos and your opening hours. Google favours profiles that look looked after.

Reviews do not appear on the website automatically. If you get one you would love shown on the site itself, send it to me and I will add it.

4. Your domain name

Your website lives at justlikehomebynicole.com. You bought it on GoDaddy, it is registered in your name until 2029, and it is connected and secured with an SSL certificate, which is the padlock you see next to the address.

Nothing to do here. The only thing to remember is that GoDaddy will email you when it is due for renewal, around August 2029. Keep paying that and the address stays yours.

Worth knowing

The domain is yours, not mine. If you ever move to a different website or a different designer, the address moves with you. Nobody can take it off you.

5. Photos, prices and wording

Just message me. Helpful things to include:

- New photos? Send them through WhatsApp as normal. Landscape or square work best for the gallery.
- Price change? Tell me the service and the new price.
- New wording? Send me the exact words you want and I will drop them in.

Small changes are quick. If it ever turns into a bigger piece of work I will always tell you the cost before I start, never after.

6. If something looks wrong

- Site looks out of date? Your phone may be showing an old saved copy. Pull down to refresh, or close the tab and open it again.
- Calendar showing the wrong thing? Check the event is on the Just Like Home Bookings calendar and not your personal one.
- Anything else? Send me a screenshot. Screenshots help more than a description because I can see exactly what you are seeing.

Your site at a glance

- Your website: `justlikehomebynicole.com`
- Enquiries go to: `jlh.petservice@gmail.com`. The form opens the customer's own email app with the details filled in, so their enquiry lands in your inbox and you can just hit reply.
- Text and call buttons: go straight to 0452 528 894.
- Your availability: add `/manage.html` to your website address.
- This guide: add `/guide.html` to your website address anytime. Both pages are hidden from customers and search engines.

Any questions at all, just message me. Nothing is a silly question and I would rather you ask than sit on something.

Andrew